FUSE 1: Malcolm Garrett Stealth

This typeface is designed primarily for use as initials alongside a sans serif text, and, like Japanese characters, these letters work equally well in either a horizontal or vertical format. The initial aim of the design was to reduce each character to a single continuous line, but for reasons of aesthetics and legibility I chose to make a few exceptions. It is a single case font, although there are some random alternative characters for no other reason than personal whim. The characters rigidly adhere to a grid made up of two concentric circles of different diameters; I wanted the character height to seem inconsistent, with the letters not quite balanced within their containing squares. This marriage of structure and incongruity appealed to me. The classical references inherent in the notion of initial caps, and the use of non-aligning characters to complement non-aligning numerals are other interesting aspects of this strictly modernist font.
